Man: OK, Marion, what would you like me to do now?

Woman: Well, let me think. I've already taken the books and the chairs out. Now you can push the bed and the desk to the middle of the room.

Man: Fine. But first you have to roll the carpet. I can carry it to the garage if you want.

Woman: It can stay. It's old and I'm going to throw it away afterwards.

Man: I'll put some old newspapers on it anyway. Now, what colour would you like the walls to be?

Woman: My mum suggested green or blue. She likes those colours the most, but they are not my favourite. I think I'd like orange on these three walls and brown on this one. I've got a lovely poster. It will look great on it.

Man: Where is it? I'd like to see it.

Woman: It's still wrapped in paper. I'll put the poster on the wall when it's dry.

Man: What shall we do now?

Woman: You can start the work and I'll make some spaghetti for us. It won't take long.

Man: But you'll help me after lunch?

Woman: Sure. I'll bring the brushes for us. If we work together, we should finish it today.

Woman: Here's our phone-in programme for teens who want to make a difference. Let's welcome our first caller. Hello, Brandon.

Boy: Hi. I'm a member of the school environmental club. We learn a lot there. Instead of buying juice in cartons at school, we take drinks from home in glass bottles that we can use again later. We also take lunches to school in plastic lunch boxes. Our club members also care for animals. Last week we decided to organise an event at our local centre for homeless dogs. We needed some help so we asked younger students to join us. Together we went to the dog centre and our group was divided into two teams. Some of my friends walked the dogs. And the rest of us cleaned the dog beds. Maybe in a month or two, we'll go to the centre again. And now, every month I send £5 to the centre. In return, I get the latest news about the dogs living there.

Man: I celebrate my birthdays with my parents and brothers. We don't have a big house so we can't throw big parties. My parents always prepare a small family celebration for me. My mum makes a big birthday cake and my dad decorates the flat. I get a nice present from each person: things which don't cost a lot, but each of them is a nice surprise for me.

Woman: My parents always organise birthday parties for me and we always celebrate together in one of the local pizza places. I have lots of relatives and most of them are invited. I only get one present, but it's from all of them. Last year I got a very good laptop. I don't throw parties for my friends. They wish me a happy birthday at school and I bring sweets for them.

Man: I usually have a big party for my birthday and it's always at home. There's a lot of space for my parents and my friends. I take care of everything on my own. I really enjoy buying food, finding CDs, decorating the house and so on. I get many presents, some of them are quite expensive, but the party itself is the biggest birthday present for me. I just love throwing such parties!

Wypowiedź 4.

Woman: I never spend my birthdays at home. Every year I go on a trip with my friends and my sister. My parents stay at home, but they pay for the trip. It's a present from them. And my sister gives me a small gift every year. But I think the best present you can get is having a great time! Things can be lost or damaged, but memories are forever!
